Nutrition

Make sure you are eating 5-6 small meals a day. Keep your body fueled and your metabolism active. Try and eat as clean as possible. Plenty of clean complex carbohydrates (wholegrain foods) before and after your workouts will provide your body with enough energy to make it right until the end.

Try and avoid carbohydrates before bedtime and eat a form of protein (turkey or fish) with some vegetables as your evening meal. Fancy a snack? Savoury popcorn or rice cakes can remove the temptation for anything sugary!

Tips

This guide will provides an excellent starting point for those wanting to shed those extra pounds. Some exercises will require equipment, but your gym should have this. If you don't currently go to a gym and don't plan on it, you can perform biceps curls and squats at home with weighted items like a full backpack, for example.

Remember, recovery is important. If you feel you need a rest day take it. Also, if you feel you can do more, increase the reps or number of sets. You can also add and substitute exercises as you see fit.
